A SYNOPSIS

ACT I ~ Prologue

The story opens in the mid nineteenth century. It is Christmas Eve and the Von Stahlbaums and their children, Clara and Fritz, have invited many of their friends and neighbors to a party. All of the children play and dance, and although it is past their bedtimes they are allowed to stay until Herr Drosselmeyer arrives. He is Clara's mysterious Godfather who always brings unusual gifts. After making dolls come to life and dance, he gives Clara a special gift, a Nutcracker. Everyone enjoys her fun with the Nutcracker except her jealous brother Fritz. Grabbing it, he throws it to the ground and breaks it. Clara's Godfather mends it, and after a final dance, all the guests say goodbye.

Later that night while everyone is asleep, Clara sneaks back downstairs to make sure her Nutcracker is safe and falls asleep. While sleeping, mice and rats appear and Clara's Nutcracker becomes life-size. He leads the Toy Soldiers in a battle against the Mice. When the Rat King is about to defeat the Nutcracker, Clara distracts him by throwing her slipper. The Nutcracker is saved and turns into a handsome Prince.

Grateful to Clara for saving his life, the Prince leads her through the Land of Snow, where they meet the Snow Queen, her Snowflakes, the Frost Maidens, and the Ice Fairy.

~~~~~ INTERMISSION ~~~~~

ACT II ~ The Land of the Sugar Plum Fairy

Clara is led to a throne that has been prepared especially for her. Cooks bring her delicious cakes and candies while troupes of dancers from distant lands entertain her. There is a lively Spanish dance representing chocolate, a slow Arabian dance symbolizing coffee, a dance representing tea from China, and a vigorous Russian Tropak representing the Ukraine. Mirlitons dance with their reed pipes and the Pulchinellas and Candy Canes amuse Clara with their antics. Next, bouquets of beautiful flowers Waltz to honor Clara, and the Sugar Plum Fairy and her Cavalier crown the festivities with the Grand Pas De Deux.

To bid farewell to their little guest, each group of dancers returns for a last goodbye, for all dreams must come to an end but, was it only a dream?

She then trained in the Professional Division at Texas Ballet Theater, where she performed in numerous ballets by Ben Stevenson O.B.E., such as The Nutcracker and Cinderella.
