

SPOTLIGHT

This month The PAC Spotlight shines on:

Central Hardin High School's Danielle Nolan

What do you want to do when you grow up?

Major in anthropology to hopefully transfer to paleontology and minor in theatre.

What have you learned from your PAC experiences?

People of all ages can come together and forget about the world for a short time. Having all these different ages starts theatre dreams that grow in kids. It also, give the chance of reliving the past memories from performances at the PAC.

How have you benefited from the PAC?

The PAC has been a therapeutic experience for me. Performing on stage helps get me out of my own head and portray another character. Portraying this other character helps me get out of my inner shell and forget the world around even if it is just for a few hours.

Why is the PAC important to you?

The PAC is important to me because it made me grow as a person. I wouldn't be myself without theatre. Doing theatre has gave me the opportunity to connect more with our community. Having this connection gave me a great sense of how powerful it is to have theatre arts to spread positive and real life message to the community. Having this optimistic environment in the community made me grow more even outside of being on stage.

Why should the PAC be important to others?

The PAC should be important to others because it helps with expanding creativity and creating a positive environment. Having this creative and positive environment helps boost the communities in joining together especially after COVID-19.

Do you have any other comments you'd like to share?

Being a part of multiple community theatres really helps the community grow and get closer together. They all give great opportunities to expand the arts.
